

A Month of Harrison.

The first month of a President's term is in a certain sense the most important. During that period he is bound to indicate in a considerable degree the principles and methods upon which he proposes to rely for success. The appointments that he must necessarily make are certain to reveal his capacity as a judge of men, and to advertise his purposes more or less with regard to various national interests. Gen. Harrison has now passed this first ordeal, and it must be conceded that he has not disappointed the popular expectation. He has met the requirements of his exalted and exacting position with thorough dignity, patience, prudence and equity. In no instance has he permitted his personal feelings and predilections to disturb his official duty, or to cloud his intelligence and characteristic good judgment. He has proceeded slowly and cautiously; there has been nothing prophetic in any of his movements. The pressure for office has been heavy and persistent, but he has not been overcome by it, and has not yielded to it beyond the point of perfect safety and propriety. His Cabinet has been decided favor with the whole country; and his selections for other important places have been received with cordial approbation.

It is easy to see that Gen. Harrison intends to be President in fact, as well as in name. He is not insensible, or careless, of the heavy responsibility which rests upon him; but he does not propose to shrink from it, nor to shift it to somebody else's shoulders. He will not repeat the grave mistake that Cleveland made in ignoring the leaders of his party and arrogating to himself the authority of an Emperor; but at the same time he will insist upon doing what he thinks to be right and expedient, even if it should be necessary for him now and then to disregard the advice received from such sources. There is no doubt of his firmness, manifestly, but none of that petty obstinacy which is simply the expression of the worst form of personal egotism. The promises of the platform upon which he was elected are realities to him, and he proposes to carry them out as far as he can. He is a conscientious man, in his politics as in his religion; and he hopes to make his Administration notable for its careful observance of all the obligations of integrity and morality. Such are the impressions we feel assured of, of a large majority of the American people. They have had a month of Harrison, and his course has justified the confidence of his friends in his wisdom and his devotion to duty. He has but to continue in the way he has started, and he will have nothing to fear. No President has ever made a better beginning, all things considered. The first test has resulted to his advantage in every respect; and it is safe to anticipate that as he gains in experience he will grow in wisdom, administration and honor. —Globe Democrat.

Special Correspondent.
April 10th, 1880.
Neither branch of the General Assembly has accomplished very much during the past week, but the workings of the Senate have been much more harmonious than those of the House of Representatives. The House has been busy with an effort on the part of the Democrats to throttle the Republicans, and deprive them of an opportunity of examining and discussing the different measures presented, before such measures are put upon a third reading and final passage. Early in the session the Democrats in the House took occasion frequently to impress upon the Republican members of that body, a realization of the fact that the Democrats were here to run this Legislature. That the Democrats were responsible for the legislation of this session, and that the Democrats proposed to run it just as they pleased. They openly admitted that they had determined in "caucus" that they would run it, and they asserted that what the Democrats saw fit to do was none of the Republicans' business. Thus the week began, and from that time until this the House has been solving—doing one day, and undoing the next day—until now, (when they are failing starting their new chair) they propose to shut off debate upon every thing, and rush bills through "in blocks of five," so to speak. As an example of the plans proposed, we need only refer to a resolution introduced last Wednesday morning by the member from Henry county, which proposed to engross all the bills at once, and to run the calendar "by one single fell swoop," without even giving an opportunity for a single bill to be examined or amended in any way—or any one on the floor. Is it any wonder that the people of Missouri get poor laws? Is it any wonder that Republicans refuse to vote for such bills? Can it be expected that honest men will support measures without an opportunity of knowing what such measures contain.

The Republicans have long since got tired of being used in this way, and have determined to have at least a small "finger in the pie" themselves. So, a few days ago, when the third reading and final passage of bills was in order, and the Democrats with their usual confidence in their ability to bulldoze Republicans into submission, were carrying every thing before them with a high hand, the Republicans, as a body, arose in their strength, gave a determined heave "against the tide," and brought the old democratic mule back to a stand upon his haunches.

As would be expected, the Democrats then wavered in their hostility. Their joyousness was no longer extravagant, for they observed very abruptly that they had taunted the opposition until they were in the air and victory was at their feet. Handicapped to some extent by the dominant party, the Republicans relied upon the constitution, backed by its provisions they demanded that bills up for passage should be read at length. The Democrats made a vigorous kick and one bill was read without being so read in spite of the loud protests of the solid Republican phalanx. In doing this the Democrats hoped to frighten the Republicans into submission, but they made a life-sized mistake. Before the vote was announced five Republican members, who had refused to vote, notified the chair that they would contest the legality of the law so passed, and to that end then and there drew up their affidavits, to be filed according to law.

This exhibition of nerve and stick-to-it-iveness gave the Democrats a chill, and thereafter it was no difficult matter to have measures read how long they read in full. Thus compelled to grin and bear it, the Democrats writhed and sweated, and cut capers until their extreme. The Republicans, firm in their undertaking, stuck to their text, demanding that every bill up for passage should be read at length, as such reading was their only means of knowing what such bills contained. It was urged by the late Republicans that as the bills had been printed and laid upon the members' desks they could read them at their leisure, and that there was no occasion for taking up the time of the House in reading them aloud.

ter they had been already passed by the House and out of its reach; and that, as such, there were no more or less of ten receding bills containing a whole chapter each laid upon their several desks daily, they could not possibly get them all read over, if they should read continuously, day and night, without sleep, so as to know what they contained as fast as they are presented to the House for passage.

At this the Democrats raved and swore, climbed upon their seats, shook their fists, waved blood and gashed their teeth—but all to no purpose. They found, finally, that for once, at least, they had met a minority in a Missouri Legislature that dared refuse to "down" at Democratic will.

The Republicans sat quiet and business-like for three straight hours, and meanwhile the good work continued to go on. Finally, the hour of adjournment came, and, without much ceremony, the belated members on both sides calmly withdrew, making it what might be called a "drawn battle." Since that time both sides have been a little more quiet; but it is very hard to tell whether or not this is the end of it. There has been too much blood stirred up on both sides and a close observer can see many unmistakable evidences of a latent volcanic determination, that is at present simply smoldering in the embers and is likely to break out afresh at any time in the greatest of fury.

The Rejected Son.
The application of this parable to the Jews is obvious. They cast out the son, and we see the full extent of their banishment from the land their God gave them. The thought comes home to our own President, the gentle Churches, which have been put into the vineyard as laborers for God. What are the fruits they have rendered? Let us take a summary look at the fruits of the Church in your neighborhood. Are groves closed? Is every den of immorality cleansed? Are politics pure? Are these things the duty of the Churches? The edification of the people is not the whole of it. What a small fraction of India or China is converted to Christ. With all of its pride in results and statistics the Church as a church deserves reproach and shame for its laxity and sloth. It is now walking with its head bowed, and the world as it is the father for the sustenance of his child.

The parabolic teaching also becomes a national warning. There is no doubt of it. The nation that cleaves the closed door, too full of God enters the longest. This Republic will never be a failure as long as its best people each day will pray, and as long as he and all responsible law makers and law enforcers do their duty in the same spirit—"in Christ's name." But the personal application none can escape. You are the household. Will you stone the Master's servants and finally kill the Master? Let us not put such thoughts in your minds. Your manhood, your honesty will be tested by your life. Be too proud to act otherwise than honestly and God-fearing. The vineyard was complete. It only needed care. The possibilities of each nation are sufficient. It needs only the spirit of conscientiousness and of work to make them bear fruit.

Notice the climax of depravity; beginning with contentment it ends murder. The first feeling of lawlessness was stamped ruthlessly under, or rather prayed away, before security can come to that heart. The momentum of sin is a fact as horrible as it is real. The final stage of sin is madness. This warning is from the Lord.

THE DEATH RECORD.

We are again called upon to record the sad and solemn tidings of death. Joseph William Jones, son of Mrs. Curt Foss, was born in Pulaski county, Indiana, March 20th, 1872, and died in Holt county, Missouri, March 21st, 1880, aged 16 years, 11 months and 22 days. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. V. J. Jones, at the Evangelical church, March 22nd, 1880, after which he was laid to rest in the Evangelical cemetery. At the funeral service the church was filled with friends who knew only too well how to sympathize with the bereaved parents.

The deceased was the pride of his mother's heart, and was loved by all who knew him. He was converted to God in a meeting held by Rev. Herbert, in January of this year, and united with the Evangelical church at the same time. The morning Willie died he said to his father, "I am ready; all is well." Then why should we mourn so bitterly, when we shall stand with him in glory? We shall meet him by and by, and he will be only a little while till we must cross the dark river; then if we have been faithful we shall stand with him in glory. The parents, we know, feel the loss of the son the most, but still there is the Sunday school class which too deeply feel the loss of one of its best members. The whole Sunday school miss the departed one, but we hope to meet him where parting is unknown.

Where sorrowing and sorrow is unknown—His spirit is waited to the land of the blest.

While the clouds of the Valley lie over him; But he heard his master calling, "Well done, good and faithful one; Come up higher where I am waiting." What your faith and love has won.

ANDERSON.
Died, at Forest City, April 5th, Mrs. Kate Anderson, only daughter of Thomas and Matilda Teare. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. B. E. Bone on last Saturday afternoon, after which kind friends tenderly laid her remains to rest in the Forest City cemetery.

Mrs. Kate Anderson was born in Doniphan county, Kansas, April 23rd, 1825, and was at the time of her death twenty-two years, eleven months and eighteen days old. When a small child her parents came to Holt county and have lived near and in Forest up to the present time. On December 21st, 1878, Miss Kate Teare was married to Mr. John H. Anderson, of Maywood, Frontier county, Nebraska, at which place they removed to make it their future home. In November of last year she came here to visit her parents, and await the completion of their new home, which had just been completed a short time before her death. Some years ago Mrs. Anderson united with the Methodist church at this place. She leaves an infant son two weeks old. Her many friends join in extending their sympathy to the bereaved ones.

DAVIS.
Died, at the home of W. H. Terry, in Forest City, on Wednesday of last week, Mr. Albert Davis. Mr. Davis was well and robustly known in Holt county, he having come to Forest at about the close of the war. He had not been for several years a hearty, robust man, and his system, which was somewhat of a surprise to Mr. Davis, who at the time was out cultivating his strawberries. But his kind wife, who has ever an eye to his health, was busy in the house preparing one of the best dinners that has been set before a company of invited guests in the past year. Mrs. Davis is not very easily excited when it comes to making a good cake and getting up a good meal, and we certainly think she put forth all her energy to displaying her skill on this occasion, and if any one should doubt it, just ask D. W. Thuma, of Oregon, for we think from the amount he got outside of one could judge better, and we agree with the assertion he made that he was always in the habit of eating too much on such occasions. The following guests were present: Stewart, R. C. Benton, D. W. Thuma and wife, Mrs. Joshua Tritt, Mrs. C. H. Clapp, Mrs. J. A. Goodhart and daughter, Mrs. Patterson, of Tripp, Mrs. Fryman, John Brodbeck, Susan Brodbeck, Lula Nash, Prior Cunningham, Oren Nichol. Mr. Davis received some beautiful presents and all enjoyed themselves exceedingly and wished Mrs. and Mrs. Davis a long and happy life and departed to their respective homes, feeling that the day was well spent.

Scottish Lad, Marmaduke & Rarus!

R. C. Benton, Proprietor of the Celebrated Stallions, Scottish Lad, Marmaduke and Rarus, a suburb of Richville, was propelling his ample proportions among our fair ones last Sunday.

The boys have "chipped in" and bought a set of boxing gloves, skinned faces, sore eyes, and swelled noses will be at a discount now in consequence of the over-production.

Gov. Morris can laugh merrier, yell louder and sing softer than he has since just now. He says it is all caused by the arrival of a bright bouncing ball at his place last Friday.

The band boys entertained Mr. Roger Williams at their band meeting Saturday night. Mr. W. is a splendid musician, having spent fourteen years in travelling with the band of the country, and we remember the time when New Point could boast of a club that didn't take a back seat for any amateur organization. We are glad to hear that he will be among us the first of each month hereafter.

Quite a number of our stock men attended the "Stallion Show" in Oregon last Saturday. They all report the exhibition a grand success in every respect. It was a day of their lives, and in their praises of Mr. Benton as manager.

A Sunday school was organized at the Sheriff's school house last Sunday. The following officers were chosen: Superintendent, T. Dodge; secretary, Marion Scott; president, John Cash.

New Point.
—Editors SISTERS:—As your columns seem to be destitute of items from this place, we will oblige by informing you of the happenings and mishaps as regularly as circumstances will permit, and will also take the opportunity to mention some of your former scribbles as near as we can remember them.

—V. L. Graham's dwelling is taking on a coat of paint, the result of John's struggles with the brush.

—Jim Stiles, a former resident of this place, but now of Nodaway county, filled his old place in the band room, Saturday night.

—James Morris, one of the most handsome peddlers of Monks' Corner, a suburb of Richville, was propelling his ample proportions among our fair ones last Sunday.

The boys have "chipped in" and bought a set of boxing gloves, skinned faces, sore eyes, and swelled noses will be at a discount now in consequence of the over-production.

Gov. Morris can laugh merrier, yell louder and sing softer than he has since just now. He says it is all caused by the arrival of a bright bouncing ball at his place last Friday.
